By LARRY ALLEN

PORT AU PRINCE, Haiti (AP) — Unofficial sources reported nearly 100 dead and wounded in the bit-weekend struggle for power in this Negro republic.

With a new provisional president in power, the third in two months, this strike-bound capital struggled back to some semblance of normality. Hundreds of shops, stores and factories reopened upon appeals from Daniel Gignole, the new provisional president, and rival presidential candidate Louis Delvalle to "remain calm and resume your normal work." There still was an air of tension, however.

Gignole, 43-year-old mathematician professor and idol of Haitian workers, said the government lacked accurate casualty figures in the shooting and fighting Saturday and Sunday but one army officer said he counted 50 bodies and believed the total would be much higher.

Gignole was sworn in yesterday as clashing political elements set aside, at least temporarily, the differences which seemed to be heading this island nation straight for civil war.

One of Gignole's first acts was to accept the resignation of Brig. Gen. Leon Contave, army chief who had tried to rule the restive Negro republic since last Tuesday. Col. Antonio Kebreau, commander of the Southern Military District, was named to Contave's post.

Contave and Haiti's police chief, Col. Pierre Armand, who had threatened civil war in a bid to take over the army command, both stood at Gignole's side as he took the oath.

Trial Against Trio Dropped in Acid Case

NEW YORK (AP) — The federal government today dropped immediate trial of its case against John Johnny (Dio) Dioguardi and three others in the acid-blinding of labor writer Victor Riese because key witnesses refused to testify.

U. S. Atty. Paul W. Williams, in asking that the case be removed from the trial calendar in U. S. District Court, said this "does not close the book." He said immediate trial "would be inviting an acquittal."

Williams told the court that the witnesses' refusal to talk "reflects the power of the underworld." "May I say that it may be gangster ethics but it is not the kind of ethics the Department of Justice will tolerate," Williams told Judge William B. Herlands.

Dio sat in the courtroom, occasionally smiling slightly. The two key witnesses, Gondolo Miranti and Domenico Bondo, previously convicted in one phase of the case, were given additional sentences for contempt in refusing to answer questions before a federal grand jury.

"The government has now done all it can under the law to compel these witnesses to testify," Williams told the court.

"Without belaboring the point, I leave it to the court to suppose what forces have compelled us to follow this desperate course."

"I will continue to press vigorously my investigation of why these witnesses have refused to testify. Their actions reflect the power of the underworld."

Sentence of Death Upheld by High Court

By LEON HATCH

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Supreme Court today affirmed the death sentence of Luther Bailey, Negro, for the rape of a 49-year-old white widow living in Little Rock.

In upholding the verdict of a Pulaski Circuit Court jury the court unanimously rejected several alleged errors including a contention of discrimination against Negroes in preparation of jury lists.

The court said that the testimony "does not show an intentional and systematic limitation of Negroes on the jury list."

Disarmament Talks Now at a Showdown

LONDON (AP) — The U. N. Disarmament subcommittee resumed negotiations today amid signs that its 10-week-old talks on international armaments reductions have reached a showdown stage.

Delegates of Russia, the United States, Britain, France and Canada met in London's Lancaster House, the session marked the end of an 11-day recess during which each of the delegates returned for consultations.

U. S. Delegate Harold E. Stassen was reported ready to lay before the subcommittee a new American proposal — fashioned at least in part by President Eisenhower — for a partial disarmament treaty.

Prior to the session, Stassen met with representatives of the other Western nations to outline the U. S. plan. He conferred at the British Foreign office with Cmdr. Allan Noble, minister of state for foreign affairs; Jules Moch of France; David Johnson of Canada.

The air of expectancy over the arms talks reached the House of Commons, where Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd said in answer to questions: "I do not think it would be wise for me to say more today than I believe there are some grounds for hoping that a partial disarmament agreement may be possible."

Film Stars in Poland Don't Get Much Money

By ANDREW BOROWICZ

PARIS, AP — The leading actress of the Polish film that won second prize in the recent Cannes Film Festival will be paid $12 a month on her return to Poland — if she is lucky.

Teresa Izwaska, blonde pride of Poland's young film industry said bitterly she also will have to borrow money for a taxicab from the Warsaw Airport to the student dormitory where she lives. She starred in "Kanal," the story of a girl in a unit trapped in a sewer during the Warsaw uprising of 1944, and was a sensational success in her first movie role.

"Yes, I am bitter and I want everybody to know it," said Miss Izwaska in an interview at a reception in the Polish Embassy in Paris.

"Everybody tells me I am a great actress — that I have a great future. I smile at photographers and shake hands with thousands of

(Editor's note: What lies beyond the atmosphere? Is it cold? Or hot? Empty? Packed with meteors? These are only a few of the questions scientists hope to answer when they shoot the first meteor into space. Here is the first of three articles bringing up to the minute U. S. plans for this dramatic project.)

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some of your destiny lies within a brilliant metal ball that looks like a huge Christmas tree ornament.

It is stunningly beautiful. Inside, it is being fitted with ingenious eyes, ears, fingers, breath voice and memory for a journey literally out of this world.

For this shiny sphere is to become a shooting star, a man-made moon circling the earth every 90 to 100 minutes.

It is going to be hurled hundreds of miles out into space by rockets reaching the never-before-attained speed of 18,000 miles an hour—five miles a second.

Out first messenger into space, it will learn facts which could greatly benefit your life, and your children's.

It will see our sun as man has never seen it... count meteors, the cosmic dust... tell us how empty, hot or cold space really is... report the thick rain of powerful cosmic rays.

It will help determine the exact shape of the earth... explore some mysteries of magnetism... aid in better production of control of weather.

It will be man's first step toward rocketing himself through space. It may turn up astounding discoveries yet undreamed of by wildest imagination.

But the Russians could do it first.

For Russia also is planning to shoot man-made moons around the earth. Our first one probably won't be fired until early next year.

No one outside Russia knows whether they are ahead of us—as yet they have announced no single detail on their progress. But you would guess the Soviets are not likely to beat us, after talking with scientists creating our little moons.

"We feel pretty good now, we've come a long way," says Dr. John P. Hagen of the Naval Research Laboratory, directing project vanguard to hoist the shiny ball into space.

"We've had our troubles, but now most of them are out of the way."

Hanging out the satellite is a main and fascinating goal in the International Geophysical Year (IGY) which begins officially July 1.

IGY corral's an army of 5,000 scientists from 58 nations into cooperative studies of weather, heat, cosmic rays, gravity, glaciers affecting our lives. All parties will share everything they learn.

Only Russia, besides us, plan to launch satellites. Russia so far has openly reported all her many plans for IGY, except for the satellite and for firing short-lived rockets to explore the upper air.

Our scientists and officials are reticent only about some details of rockets which will put the little moon into its orbit. For rocketry involves military secrets.

There is much speculation that the first nation to conquer space could control the world—putting all nations under telescopic observation from space platforms, hitting any target anywhere on outer space. There are also proposals to put space under international control.

But the IGY moons are dedicated purely to peaceful benefit of all peoples.

House GOPs Will Try to Restore Defense Cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican leaders agreed today to try to restore to the 1958 defense appropriation bill about 300 million dollars of the 2½ billion cut out by the Appropriations Committee.

The party's 30-member steering committee agreed to support amendments to spread the extra money through all three branches of the armed services.

The 300 million dollars represents about a fourth of the $1,200,000,000 which the President said ought to be put back in the bill in the interest of security.

Rep. Martin of Massachusetts, Republican leader and chairman of the Policy Committee, said there was some sentiment for trying to restore more than 300 million dollars and some for seeking to put back less than that amount.

He said he expected most Republicans to support the amendments but added that some Democratic votes would be needed.

The amendments will be offered when the House starts considering the money allotments in the 33½-billion-dollar defense appropriation bill tomorrow. It debated the bill last Friday and set aside today's session for more discussion.

Rep. Taber of New York, senior Republican on the Appropriations Committee, said he would go along with the move to put more money in the bill. Taber usually leads moves to cut appropriations. Martin said he would attempt to force roll call votes on the proposed increases.

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas said he does not consider Eisenhower's defense request as "sacred and untouchable."

He did not say how much he favors for defense but commented that "no budget recommendation is sacred. Congress must still apply its judgment as to the size of the recommendations."

Deputy Secretary of Defense, Robert A. Quarles said even the $1,300,000,000 of House committee cuts accepted by the Pentagon will "create problems in future years." Eisenhower had described that amount of the cut as a book-keeping move.

Opinions Vary on Ike's Veto Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Keating (R-NY) said today enactment of legislation to give a president the item veto power would be "the single most constructive procedural blow" Congress could strike for government economy.

Keating, author of a proposed constitutional amendment to grant such power, told a House Judiciary subcommittee in prepared testimony that "failure of Congress to act is costing American taxpayers billions of dollars."

Lined up to present the Eisenhower administration's case for the proposal were Secretary of the treasury Humphrey and Budget Director Percival F. Brundage.

In advance of the hearing, the subcommittee chairman, Willis (D-La) said in an interview he is approaching the matter "with a completely open mind." Some other members of Congress, including Senate Republican Leader, Knowledge of California — are outspoken against the item veto.

Like many presidents before him, Eisenhower wants authority to veto selected items without having to reject an entire appropriations bill.

Keating said that under the present system, a president is faced with "an all-or-nothing proposition, with little or no time to exercise his executive prerogative, without endangering the smooth operation of the government."

"It boils down to forcing our chief executive to sign an appropriation bill with a shotgun at his head," he said.

Keating, a senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee, disputed contentions that the item veto proposal represents "usurpation" of congressional authority.

"A few toes might be stepped on, but that's all to the good in many of these flagrant pork-barrel cases which have gotten through sometimes in the past," he said.

Eisenhower has challenged the Democratic-controlled Congress to give him selective veto power. In a telephone message Friday to a Republican rally in Trenton, N. J., the President said that with such power "I could easily do some serious expense cutting."

But since a constitutional amendment is invited, Eisenhower can get his wish only if two-thirds of the House and of the Senate vote to strip Congress of one of its most useful advantages in dealing with the executive.

Pro-Red China Forces Organize Riots on Formosa

By ROBERT BROWN

TAIPEI (UP) — U. S. officials said today the riots in Taipei were "definitely organized," possibly by political forces anxious to make a deal with the Chinese Communists.

Communists thought Asia seized on the riots in an all out effort to discredit American activities in the Far East. A threat of new anti-American riots in Manila caused the U. S. Embassy there today to order precautions.

The Americans said they believed no top government officials and any part in the widespread destruction of Friday but they did blame inaction by the government on the completeness of the destruction.

American officials planned some of their suspicion on the deliberate attack on the embassy code room — an attack which compromised some of the codes used by the embassy.

The demonstrators entered the embassy armed with heavy tools and set to work on a heavy iron door guarding the code room. When they failed to make a dent they began digging through the six-inch concrete wall.

Ordinary demonstrators inflamed by some momentary anger probably would have passed on to some easier target, the American officials said.

U. S. Ambassador Karl Rankin said the code room destruction will mean some "readjustment" of American codes. He would not elaborate.

The American sources said Chinese elements in Taipei might have had internal political reasons for ordering the attack which wrecked the interior of the embassy and other American buildings here.

They said anyone wanting to take over the government from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek might find such anti-American outbreaks and serious destruction of American property a big advantage in ending U. S. support of Chiang.

40 Killed, 70 Injured in Turkey Quake

ISTANBUL (AP) — Rescue teams digging through the ruins of earthquake-shattered villages in northern Turkey today counted at least 40 killed and 70 injured.

Casualty reports mounted rapidly as searchers reached the area about 100 miles southeast of Istanbul where the quake struck yesterday.

Officials in Bolu province, which felt the blunt of the shock, estimated 40 dead. There were unconfirmed reports of scattered deaths in the adjoining provinces. At least 280 houses were destroyed.

Hardest hit by the quake, which also shook tourist-jammed Ankara and Istanbul, were villages south of the provincial capital of Bolu.

The quake struck at 8:33 a. m. yesterday. Shocks lasting for 10 seconds toppled houses and sent tile roofs crashing into the streets, Minarets came tumbling from building tops.

In a resort village of Aband, a hotel collapsed, killing three persons.

Worst damage occurred in the town of Mundurnu and the villages of Aband, Beypozari and Suzce.

The quake was also felt throughout central and western Turkey but no serious damage was reported in those areas.

To floods were a by-product of about 10 days of turbulent weather, including numerous tornadoes and thunderstorms, in Oklahoma and Arkansas.

The weather cleared over the weekend and the forecast today called for partly cloudy skies and mild temperatures and did not mention rain or wind.

Fed by recent torrential rains, the Arkansas River continued its mauling across west and central Arkansas yesterday, forcing hundreds of persons to leave their homes and inundating additional thousands of farm land acres.

But the weather smiled on Arkansas during the afternoon and evening. Most areas reported clear skies for a change. River experts said a few more days of dry weather could ease the flood threat tremendously.

The towns of Moffett, Okla., just across the line from Fort Smith, and North Little Rock, 150 miles to the southeast, absorbed the watery punches of the Arkansas yesterday.

The last of 400 persons, Moffett's entire population, were evacuated last night as a foot of water washed over the town. The evacuation began Saturday. Moffett was unprotected by any levee.

Soldiers and trucks from nearby Fort Chaffee and moving vans from Fort Smith aided in the evacuation.

Rackets

The Senate Rackets committee will take stock this week and decide which case to investigate next, and when. Best guess is that hearings will start about June 4. The committee has several cases nearly ready. Its No. 1 choice is an investigation of Teamster "paper local" unions in New York. But that one is stymied, for the moment, because of the pending trial of hoodlum Johnny Dio, implicated in the acid blinding of Labor Columnist Victor Riesel.

First Aid

If Egypt and Syria don't come through with their promised payments to Jordan, the United States and Saudi Arabia can expect an urgent appeal for immediate help from Jordan's young King Hussein. Saudi Arabia has paid its share. Egypt and Syria have failed to come through, and Hussein's treasury is about empty.

Don't bet any money of the American entrants in the British Amateur Golf tournament which started today. This season's American contingent of 24 is the weakest in years. It isn't expected to be played in England this year, stand-out American amateurs did no make the trip. Three "old timers" — Jimmy McHale, Frank Strafaci and Dale Morey — represent America's strongest threat. None of them is expected to reach the semi-finals.

Janelle Warren

Reveals Plans

For Wedding

Miss Janelle Warren and John Kauffman Jr., have completed plans for their wedding. Miss Warren is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wade Warren, and Mr. Kauffman is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Kauffman.

The ceremony will be performed at 3 o'clock in the afternoon June 2 in the Garret Memorial Baptist Church by Eld. Elbert O'Steen. Music will be by Carolyn Phillips, pianist, and Dana Lou Cunningham and Billy Mitchell, soloists.

Mr. Warren will give his daughter in marriage. Vivian Tonne-maker will be maid of honor and bridesmaids will be Jewel Shope and Norma Nell Taylor. Ginny Warren, sister of the bride, will be junior bridesmaid. Tim Timmons of Blanchard.

On the honeymoon, a girl likes pretty clothes that are practical too. This girl has included casual clothes in cotton corduroy that are easy on the upkeep. She wears (left), for hours in the sun, trimly tailored short-skirts with neat cuffed leg. Matching top is a cotton knit fashioned like a camisole. Her car coat (center) is ideal for all travel from spring to fall. It's wide wale corduroy with leather trim and big pockets. She wears it with a cloche that folds easily for packing. The classic corduroy jacket (right) is worn with matching pants in clam-digger length. Underneath, she has a cotton knit shirt trimmed with the corduroy.

Satellite Could

armingly simple. "You put the satellite into an orbit. You prove it's there. You do something scientific with it," Dr. Hagen says.

Actually, it involves a tremendous effort by hundreds of scientists, at a cost of millions of dollars.

The little moon is only the size of a bushel basket, weighs 20½ pounds, easy enough for a woman to lift with one hand.

But it must be shot to a speed that will counterbalance the earth's pull of gravity, so it swings about like a ball on the end of a string. Then it will stay up, in an elliptical orbit bringing it no closer than 200 miles from earth nor farther than 1,200 to 1,500 miles away.

"If we miss the minimum speed by one foot per second, we fail," Dr. Hagen points out. "In this horse race, we must win on the nose."

The ball is a thin magnesium shell given fantastically thin coatings on the outside of zinc, copper, silver, gold — two ounces of gold worth $70 — chromium, and aluminum. And a special outer invisible coating of silicon monoxide to help it get rid of excess heat and safeguard the delicate, insulated instrument inside.

Inside it, scientists are putting instruments to become the extensions and perceptions of the senses of man in outer space.

The moon will rise up enclosed in the hose of a rocket 72 feet long, weighing 10 tons. It will be three rockets, firing off in stages.

The first and larger two fall away after doing their job. The last one must race the ball up to its maximum, and correct, speed and altitude, then shove it away with a spring mechanism.

For a while there will be two satellites, the ball itself and the four-foot-long third stage rocket. Gradually they will drift apart.

But the glistening ball will chatter back to earth by radio telling — who knows what?

dozens of families also fled from their homes at Arkham, Okla., a few miles south of Moffatt, and some Fort Smith residents pulled out of a riverbank area.

At North Little Rock, plagues for days by minor floods in three low sections, nearly 200 persons were evacuated.

Civil Defense headquarters there said that about 400 persons had been ordered to leave their homes since Saturday.

The latest evacuees were housed temporarily in railroad box cars. The homeless at Moffatt found shelter in private homes, a National Guard armory and a church.

At Dardanelle, south of Russellville, National Guardsmen and volunteer workers successfully fought an all-night battle with the Arkansas.

The river had spilled over a levee that was partially destroyed several years ago. Work crews tried to contain it a few miles away with a secondary protective barrier of sandbags.

Dear Granny: I agree that 10 is a bit young to start dating. Children today are their parents' almost from the cradle. Little girls copy mother's hair-do, small boys graduate from three-cornered pants to long trousers in one fell swoop. Elders may frown on the trend, but it's up to the parents to do something about it.

Says Waltz Least Butchered Dance

HOT SPRINGS (AP) — Irene Castle who says she and her late husband Vernon Castle put grace into dancing during the bad '20s, contends today's dance floor gyrations pale even the "Black Bottom" by comparison.

The 64-year-old former showgirl, now Mrs. George Ensinger wife of a semi-retired Chicago advertising executive, said even the Turkey Trot, Grizzly Bear and Texas Tommy, popular when she was the dancing rage, were not so bad nor so ugly as the dance of today's rock and roll tempo.

She and her husband spend several months a year at Eureka Springs, Ark., and visit Hot Springs.

The waltz is the least encephaloned of all the dances from her era she said. "It is less beat up by moderns," is the way she put it.

Italian Star Says Acting on TV Too Fast

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD — In a rare moment of reflection, Anna Magnani held forth on such matters as TV, "I hate it," Hollywood firm making "too fast," and Tennessee Williams "I love that man."

She had a day off from her second American film, "Obsession," and so she could talk.

I tossed a variety of questions at her and she often reacted violently. About TV—

"I hate it. Sitting and watching it is like looking at the ball whirling around a roulette table. It means nothing."

"I've had lots of offers to do TV. I can't make love to a microphone. At least on the stage or in films you can work up emotion in a scene. In TV, it is impossible to put emotion on that tiny screen."

How does she like working in Hollywood films?

"I like the people, but the work is too fast. You can't manufacture emotion in a hurry."

Would she like to live here?

"No. There is not enough excitement. New York, perhaps. But I could never stay away from Rome. Rome is beautiful. At night it is like a beautiful woman who has fallen asleep."

Will she return here?

"Yes, I will come back next year to do 'Uphesus Descending.' It is a beautiful part which Tennessee Williams wrote for me. I love that man. He is perhaps my best friend."

What about American men?

"I don't know anything about American men because I haven't met enough of them. If you ask me about American actors, I can tell you: They are very, very nice."

A LONELY WALK

Copyright 1956 by Kendall Foster Crossen.

By M. E. CHABER

By M. E. CHABER

Home were the hunters. They were straggling up toward the house, all of them looking pleased with themselves. The servants were with them, carrying six large, and very dead, hogs. It made quite a procession.

I'd thought that I might get down to look in the cases before the others returned, but I had killed too much time. I'd have to try to make it while the others were dressing.

Even as he guests were streaming into the house, the servants were hanging the hogs by poles and were hanging the hogs by their feet. When they were all hung, one of the men departed for the main house at a trot. The others immediately went to work. I noticed that others were already carrying big pots of boiling water, down to where they were working on the pigs.

I was so fascinated watching them that I did not hear Baron Gambero approaching.

"Signor March," he said loudly. I looked around to see him standing directly behind us. He was still wearing his hunting clothes. "I have the honor to announce that you have won the prize for the largest boar killed in today's hunt. Your boar weighed 486 pounds."

"Well, good for me," I said in English. I realized that this was hardly adequate, and I switched back to Italian. "You might even say that the boar picked me rather than the other way around; perhaps he should give the prize to the boar."

Several of the women giggled and the baron frowned. I hadn't helped the situation any.

"I'm really honored," I added. Then, mostly to change the subject, I gestured toward where some of his men were carrying two boars into the freezer.

"What's happening down there, Baron? Why are they butchering four of the hogs and not the other two?"

He brightened up. "The two that are being taken into the freezer," he said, "are for the Sisters of Gentle Mercy in Tuscany. It is a convent which was started by an ancestor of mine. Two boars from every hunt go to them; it is a pledge of mine. They are frozen whole and then delivered to the convent. The others are being butchered for the servants."

He left without waiting to see if I would excuse him.

"Oh, Milo," Gianna said, "you did kill the largest boar. I'm so proud of you."

"Did you ever stop to think how the boar might feel about it?" I asked her. "He was probably mortified at being killed by a mere American. After all, the nearest my ancestors ever came to wild boar hunting was trapping a mouse in the kitchen. Think what the sows must be saying to each other now."

"What are they saying?" "Oink," I said.

"Oh, Milo," she said. "You are making the joke again."

"Am I?" I said in mock surprise. "I thought I was just sounding piggyish." As soon as I said it, I was sorry. It wasn't Gianna's fault that all of her assets were in looks. The baron was fair game but I had no right to make fun of her. "I'm sorry, Gianna. I'm in a foul mood at the moment, and I'm taking most of it out on you. That's not fair."

"It's all right, Milo," she said. The way she said it made me feel more ashamed of myself. "I don't understand you most of the time, but whatever you do is all right."

"You're a very sweet girl, Gianna," I said. For the moment I was tempted to tell her that she was wasting her time; that the only way I could get her to Hollywood would be to buy her a ticket. But it would mess up things.

I wasn't giving her my full attention. I was too busy watching what was happening on the other

16 Persons Meet Death by Violence

By The Associated Press

Sixteen persons died violently in Arkansas during the week which ended at Sunday midnight.

Traffic accidents claimed six lives, drownings four and shoot-three.

One person died in a fall, one was electrocuted and one was killed when struck by a tree limb, which apparently had been weakened by storms.

A teen-aged Negro girl tentatively identified by police as Allena Bouie of Pine Bluff was stabbed fatally last night in a night-club brawl.

Officers were seeking another teen-aged Negro girl in the slaying, which came after an argument between two girls.

William Eugene Bishop, 17, drowned Sunday while fishing in a lake on his family's farm about six miles south of Jonesboro.

Sheriff Lonnie Cooper said the youth apparently fell into the water while fishing from a stump near the bank. The victim was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Bishop.

A Memphis woman was killed Saturday night when a car crashed into a bridge on state Highway 79 near West Memphis. State Trooper Hollis Fair identified her as Savannah Robinson, a Negro.

side of the house. The two hogs had been put into the freezer and now the servants were busy butchering the other four. But something new had been added. Another servant had appeared from the main house. He had walked stolidly down to the wine cellar and was now on his way toward the freezer. He was carrying something but I couldn't see what it was.

"We continued to chatter, while I watched the butler make several more trips between the wine cellar and the freezer. Finally, he made what was apparently his last trip and headed back for the house. The other servants were still busy butchering on the far side of the freezer. I glanced into the house. There was no one in sight except the bartender, so apparently all the men were still busy changing clothes.

"Within the hour," Gianna said, "many will start going home and we probably should before it's too late."

"That's a good idea, honey," I said. "You go ahead and change. I'll wait here for you."

"I won't be long," she said. She stood up and walked away. It looked as if this was my chance to check up, and I didn't have long before I had to be down on the beach to meet Piero.

It wasn't much except a hunch, but I felt certain that the butler had been moving the contents of those three cases from the wine cellar to the freezer.

I got up and walked around the back of the house. I could reach the freezer without being seen by the servants who were butchering. No one else was in sight. My only danger was in being spotted from the main house. I'd have to depend on luck, and that wasn't

Proposals to Protect Union Funds Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Eisenhower administration broadened its proposals for protection of labor welfare pension funds today to cover all funds and to provide criminal penalties for stealing from them.

The broad new bill was presented to a Senate Labor subcommittee by Secretary of Labor Mitchell, who said in prepared testimony that findings of the Senate Rackets Investigating Committee, other congressional probes and his department's studies had brought the conclusion "that our original proposals may be improved and strengthened."

The new proposals went far toward meeting objections which Sen. Douglas (D-Ill.) had raised to the former administration proposals in testimony prepared for the same hearing. Douglas is the author of another bill on the same subject.

Douglas' prepared testimony had said that while the framers of the original administration bill "have good intentions, the work of their hands is a toothless cripple."

Douglas' bill, like the new administration plan, would apply to both union and management-operated funds and would provide criminal penalties for misuse.

House hearings are also to start in a few days on similar legislation, a major step aimed at curbing labor corruption. An estimated 75 million workers and members of their families are beneficiaries of these funds.

The new administration bill would provide for registration with the Labor Department, together with annual audits, on all such funds on which tax exemptions or deductions are allowed under the federal tax laws, as well as plans covering employees in any industry affecting interstate commerce.

Will The Unions Really Clean Up?

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP) — The AFL-CIO has laid the groundwork for keeping its member unions and their officers honest and democratic. That shows good intentions. But two questions remain unanswered.

How hard will the AFL-CIO work at cleaning its own house? And can it really do a good job without action by Congress in the form of new laws to guard the money and interests of rank-and-file union members?

The AFL and CIO, when they merged in 1955, wrote into their constitution machinery for investigating wrongdoing by unions and their officers and for suspending and expelling them.

That was done before the nation was shocked this year by the Senate Rackets Committee's disclosures involving the Teamsters Union and the handling of its funds by its president, Dave Beck.

Those disclosures gave the AFL-CIO added reason for doing its own cleaning earnestly or facing the prospect of having the federal government do it.

But unionists play politics among themselves. And, like politicians, they are bound to have respect for size and numbers.

Investigating and throwing out a small union is neither difficult nor shattering. Taking the initiative against a giant union requires more guts.

The AFL-CIO did not begin its investigation of Beck's Teamsters, biggest union of all, until the Senate committee's revelations made such an investigation inescapably necessary.

If a Senate Committee was needed to tell the AFL-CIO what was going on in Beck's union, what reason is there to believe it will be any more perceptive or active against some other big union until it is forced to act?

That is why burden of proof is on the AFL-CIO to show it means business permanently when it asserts, through a series of well-sounding statements, its determination to do its own police work.

The key instrument in the AFL-CIO constitution for ferreting out corrupt or undemocratic practices on its union is the Executive Council.

This council is composed of top officials from the member unions, which have traditionally resented outside prying into their affairs. It is the real power in the AFL-CIO.

The constitution says this council, when requested to do so by President George Meany, or any council member, can investigate corruption or bad practices in a member union.

In addition, it can hold hearings and order a union's suspension.

Only the annual convention can vote to expel.

But in a resolution which it adopted in January the council pointed out one serious limitation on its ability to bring corruption to light.

The AFL-CIO does not have subpoena power. Legislative committees and law enforcement agencies, which do have such power, can compel the appearance of witnesses and production of records under penalty of punishment for refusing.

Last week the council fired Beck from its list of vice presidents. It also suspended the small Laundry Workers Union and gave two other small unions, the Industrial and Distillery Workers, a choice between suspension and probation.

A Senate committee exposed welfare fund abuses in those two unions two years ago and the council was not satisfied with their efforts to clean up. Last week's action was the strongest taken by the AFL-CIO since its merger two years ago.
